Plans Discussion Today of Matters Piled Up While He Traveled in Brazil

Heavy Problems Must Chart U. S. Course on Aid to Europe, World Friction and Cost of Living

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—President Truman returned to Washington from his 20-day trip to Brazil today and immediately called the White House staff to meet this afternoon to discuss the important business which accumulated in his absence.

The Presidential Yacht Williamsburg docked at the Washington Navy Yard and after a few minutes getting things ashore, the President, Mrs. Truman and daughter Margaret walked down the gangplank to waiting automobiles.

The yacht bore the Presidential party up the Potomac river from Norfolk, Va., where the members disembarked yesterday from the battleship Missouri in their return from Rio de Janeiro.

The yacht docked at 6:45 a. m. (EST). The President remarked to those on the dock: "You don't know how to appreciate your own country till you are away."

Spotting a newsreel cameraman whom he knew, he smiled and said: "We missed you on this trip. Where have you been; out with Taft?"

The President was referring to the western trip of Senator Taft (R-Ohio).

Mr. Truman faces the task of charting his course on problems of emergency aid to Europe, international friction and the rising cost of living.

May-Call Special Session One of the first questions facing the chief executive after his Rio journey was whether to call a special session of Congress to deal with assistance for Europe.

Underlining the importance attached to Europe's plight, Secretary of State Marshall arranged to leave a meeting of the United Nations Assembly in New York for a quick trip to the capital tomorrow, presumably to give the President his special session views.

Marshall has already stated his belief that there is a crisis which cannot wait until he scheduled reconvening of Congress in January.

Major Matters Here are the top priority questions which will receive his attention in the immediate days ahead:

1—Foreign aid. Will a special session of Congress be necessary to provide stop-gap aid to Europe pending enactment of the long-term Marshall plan? The President when he left for Rio was of the opinion that none was necessary.

2—Prices, food and other costs have taken another sharp turn upward since the President left for Brazil Aug. 31. There has been talk for and against restoring price controls, proposals for voluntary reduction of meat consumption, broader export controls.

3—Police. A new chairman for the Democratic National Committee probably will have to be found shortly. Robert E. Hannen.

School Supervisory District Doomed By Regents Board

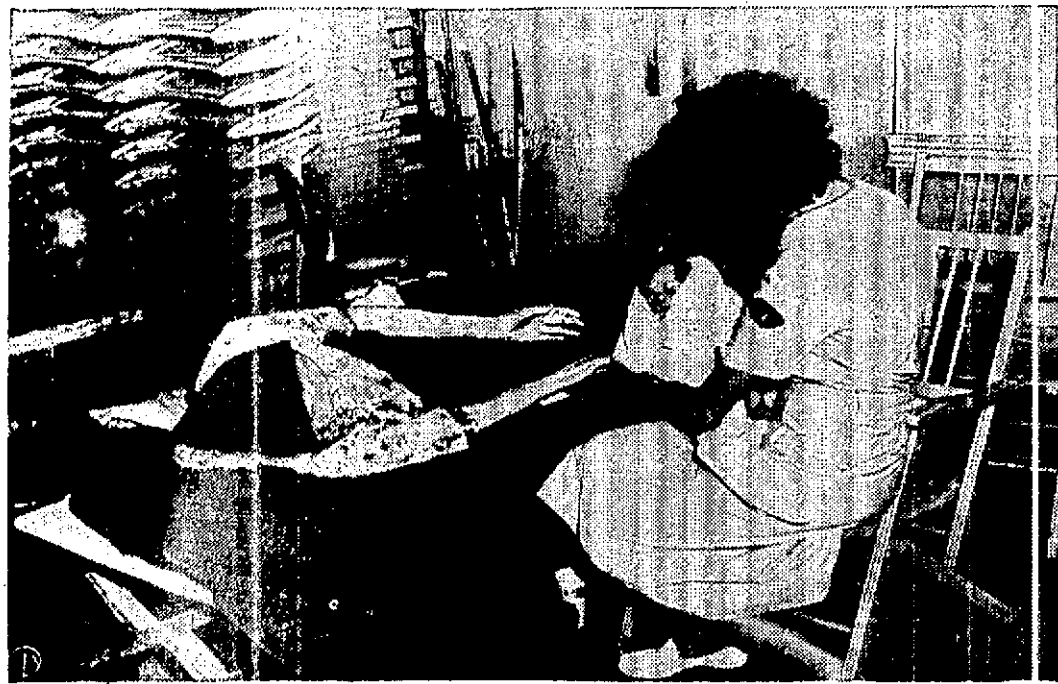

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—Consolidation of school resources in New York's rural areas and small communities to raise educational opportunities to an urban level was projected today by the state.

The Board of Regents yesterday directed Education Commissioner F. J. Spaulding to prepare plans for a new type of intermediate school district described as "an administrative unit composed of central, union free and common school districts."

Such a unit, the board said, would ultimately replace the present school supervisory district, and allow pooling of facilities to offer services which "the smaller school districts cannot furnish economically or effectively."

Spaulding is to give the board cost estimates and proposed legislation to effect the plan.

Refugees From the Storm

Refugees are getting to be a common sight in the path of the hurricane that has swept across Florida and the Gulf into Louisiana. These found shelter in an emergency station at West Palm Beach, Fla., Mrs. Ljeretia Hamong, 106 (on cot) was the oldest refugee there and Stanley Banasch, five days, was the youngest. Crutches and chairs in background were for other hurricane victims. (NEA Telephoto.)

Barn on Propheter Ulster Park Farm Destroyed by Fire

Started During Wind Storm; Considerable Amount of Hay in the Large Barn

Fire of undetermined origin Friday afternoon destroyed the large barn on the Propheter farm at Ulster Park, across Route 9-W from Aero Lake Airport. The fire started during the high wind storm about 4:30 o'clock and when the Port Ewen Fire Department arrived the flames were beyond control, Chief Edward F. Malnes said. However the Port Ewen firemen laid some 1,550 feet of hose to the barn and two streams were put on the fire. The Esopus fire department also was summoned and aided in controlling the fire.

Port Ewen pumped from the lake to the Esopus apparatus and the Esopus firemen played two streams on the fire.

Richard Propheter stated that he did not know how the fire started. There was no live stock in the barn but there was a considerable amount of hay in the large barn.

In order to play water on the barn the hose lines were laid across Route 9-W and traffic was routed over the old road from the Hercules road south to the junction near Della's fruit stand. The flames were driven by the high wind, which fortunately were away from the Propheter house and prevented the house from being damaged, and embers were blown to dry grass in the field.

There were several fires in the area and a portion of the fields south of the barn were burned over. The Della stand was threatened and twice flames were extinguished there when buildings were threatened.

Port Ewen was summoned at 4:35 o'clock and stood by until 7:45 o'clock.

Peace Formula: Bishop Oxnham

Declaring that strict adherence to the Christian idea of living would lead to a better world tomorrow, C. Bromley Oxnham, D.D., L.L.D., Bishop of the New York area, addressed the closing meeting of the 80th Methodist conference session and youth rally Friday evening at the Trinity Methodist Church auditorium.

A large and interested audience, made up mainly of the younger set, listened attentively to the famous Bishop who intermingled a rather amusing incidents with his challenge to the assembly.

Last night's talk was the 11th in a series of 15 lectures which Bishop Oxnham is conducting in a tour of New York, New Jersey and western Massachusetts. He is scheduled to appear in Middletown to address the Newburgh district rally today.

After being introduced by the Rev. Burton P. Thur, superintendent of the Kingston district of Methodist Churches, the speaker briefly talked on closely associated topics for his address which was on the theme, "Who Will Make the Maps of the World Tomorrow?"

The vital and up to the minute topic proved to be an interesting subject even though the stark reality of what the world of tomorrow holds for the populace, was deep in the minds of every listener.

One of Two Worlds Bishop Oxnham, who has seen much of the devastation wrought on the European countries as a result of World War 2, warned the assembly that the world of tomorrow will be one of two kinds.

Urges City-Wide Support of Drive For Y.W. $14,000

Vocational Guidance Head Praises Program for Women; Canvass for 2 Weeks

"The community gets it all back with interest," Miss Helen Fuller, vocational guidance counselor from New York city, said last night as she urged city-wide support of the Y.W.C.A. financial campaign. The drive for $14,000 to cover necessary expenses of the local association for the coming year was opened at dinner meeting in the Y building.

Workers will make a door-to-door canvass of the wards in the city for donations during the next two weeks. A larger quota has been set this year because of the general rise in costs as well as the added upkeep of the new building at 209 Clinton avenue which the Y.W. now owns and Camp Triangle Acres.

Mayor William F. Edelmuth officially opened the campaign urging the workers to sell the idea of a Y.W.C.A. as a meeting place for women where they will find wholesome recreation and activities.

The guest speaker, Miss Fuller, also summed up the idea of the Y.W.C.A. in the words in its motto, "Fellowship." "What all girls in common want, they want to share," she continued as she gave the reason for the clubs, classes, sports, games and gymnasiums.

Variety Program She spoke of the many opportunities to improve oneself found in the Y.W.C.A. with music, arts, skills, crafts, discussions on personal growth.

Career Across Florida and the Gulf Coast Leaves 13 Dead, 500 Injured

(By The Associated Press) New Orleans, Sept. 20 (AP)—A vicious, 11-day-old hurricane, born in the Caribbean Sea, was dying out early today in northern Louisiana after a rip-roaring career across southern Florida and the gulf coast where it left at least 13 dead and around 500 injured.

Properly damage across the afflicted Florida area and from New Orleans eastward to Biloxi, Miss., on the gulf coast was immense and so far, impossible to estimate. The weather bureau placed the center of the storm about 50 to 60 miles south, southeast of Shreveport in northwest Louisiana and still bearing on a northwesterly course at about 15 miles per hour.

The bureau said winds of 30 to 40 miles per hour with gusts up to 50 miles per hour are being reported within 100 miles of the center.

On its present course, said the bureau, the hurricane will travel with diminishing intensity into northwestern Texas and southern Oklahoma.

No more advisories will be issued on this storm, the bureau said, but a bulletin will be issued about mid-morning.

Lake Borgne late last night backed up into Bayou Bienvenue, broke through a railroad embankment and flooded a sizeable section of the eastern part of New Orleans.

2,000 Evacuated Police reported that 2,000 persons have been evacuated and rescue efforts are still under way.

The lake overflowed ahead of the heavy winds and had caused no damage until the heavy embankment of the Southern Railway gave way.

An area 25 blocks long and 16 blocks wide in a residential section of New Orleans was under water. There were no estimates of its depth.

The break occurred at about midnight (E.S.T.). Lake Borgne adjoins Lake Pontchartrain and is about 10 miles east of New Orleans. The east end of the lake is open to the Mississippi Sound.

With several already reported dead in southern Florida in the wake of the storm, a merger radio report received by a hair operator in Jackson, Miss., from the naval reserve station at Gulfport, Miss., told of six being killed by the storm in the Gulfport-Biloxi area and some 400 being injured.

Only bare information was obtainable, but the picture in the gulf resort area was grim. Battered houses, splintered boats and first aid workers driving themselves through the night to administer aid by flashlight to some 100 injured collected in the naval reserve armory at Gulfport.

Tornado Rises And, as an aftermath of the hurricane, a tornado rose at Apalachicola, Fla., cutting a 250-foot-wide swath for three miles through that northwest Florida town. One hundred were injured, 14 seriously enough to require hospitalization.

From Biloxi westward to New Orleans information poured in by every conceivable means which indicated that region was a mass of wrecked houses, ruined vacant cottages, destroyed crops and bonns staved in from stem to stern.

Railroad causeways were reported down or under water. So were highways. Sewerage works badly battered. Bayous were in flood with a great area inundated. And all through the region hundreds were reported homeless. These homeless found what shel-

Body of Man Is Found Hanging in Blue Mt. Cottage

F. C. Walton of Bronx Takes His Life by Suicide, Verdict of Coroner

When John C. Sauer and Arthur Simmons of Saugerties went to Blue Mountain Friday afternoon to inspect the cottage of Frederick Charles Walton, 66, of 2840 Bailey avenue, Bronx, they intended to look over the premises for the purposes of selling it but instead found the body of the owner hanging in the house. Walton had apparently been dead for several days according to State Police who were summoned.

Dr. Lester Sontag of Saugerties was called and the troopers at Lake Katrine and Coroner Ernest A. Kelly notified.

Coroner Kelly gave a verdict of suicide by hanging. The remains were taken to Sage by the Simmons Brothers Funeral Home at Saugerties and the state police communicated with the New York city police in an effort to locate members of the family. Later a message was received that a daughter had been notified and would travel to Saugerties.

Last Monday Walton arrived at Saugerties and went to the real estate office of Mr. Sauer where he stated he wanted to dispose of the cottage which he recently bought. He left the key with Sauer and Simmons after listing the property for sale. At that time it was believed Walton was to return to the city. He apparently went to the cottage and shortly after committed the act. It was estimated that the body had been hanging for at least four days when discovered Friday afternoon. A piece of cotton sash cord had been used.

Corporal John Metzger and Trooper E. C. Rock of the B.C.I. unit at Lake Katrine and Trooper Pape made an investigation. There were no marks of violence and at the conclusion of the investigation a verdict of suicide was rendered.

Hopes for Drop in Living Costs

Anderson Hopes Grain Drop Will Start Downward Trend

(By The Associated Press) The country-wide verbal bombardment at the high cost of living grew in volume today.

But the downward price trend in most of the major grain and livestock markets this week carried some relief for the consumer that some relief from the soaring prices for food and other items was in sight.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, who on Monday will meet with President Truman's Food Study Committee, expressed hope that the price drops in the grain markets would "start a downward trend" in the general cost of living.

"I hope prices soon will begin to reflect a realistic trend," Anderson told reporters in Chicago where he changed trains yesterday for his trip to Washington. "The solution of the price question lies in production. If we produce more and more, prices will go down."

Anderson and other top government officials prepared to take some action designed to stem the soaring prices for food and other items. The price situation, with wholesale food prices hitting all-time highs, ranked among top priority items for Mr. Truman's attention upon his return today to Washington after his South American trip.

There has been talk for and against restoring price controls, suggestions for voluntary reduction of meat consumption and food export controls. Secretary Anderson said he favored any voluntary rationing program that would relieve the demand for high priced foods but opposed federal rationing.

But in Philadelphia, Henry A. Wallace, former vice president, told reporters that the "only effective way" to lower the cost of living was for Congress to restore rationing and price controls. Senator Ives, (R-N.Y.) disagreed, and said that price controls would cut production and encourage black markets. He said he would oppose restoring federal controls except as a last resort.

In San Francisco, Senator Taft (R-Ohio) accused President Truman of a policy of "planned inflation," and said the direct result

La Guardia Dead; Split Looms in New York Mayor, UNRRA Director

F. H. LA GUARDIA

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Fiorello H. La Guardia, 64, three times mayor of New York and former director general of U.N.R.R.A., died today.

The fiery political leader had been in a coma since Tuesday night when he collapsed at his home. His health had been failing since last June when he underwent an operation which disclosed an incurable pancreas condition.

The announcement of his death brought an immediate tribute from his successor as chief executive of New York, Mayor William O'Dwyer.

"In his death the people of the city, the state and nation have lost a great, patriotic citizen," O'Dwyer said. He added:

"I fully believe that his unselfish devotion to the people and his untiring and energetic efforts to promote public welfare contributed to a great extent to the failing health which culminated in death today."

La Guardia died in his sleep, Dr. George Baehr, attending physician, said. Dr. Baehr had been at the La Guardia home since 7:30 last night. Dr. Meyer Karash, another physician, also was there.

When La Guardia died at 7:22 a. m. his wife, their two children Erik, 15, and Jean, 18, and Mrs. La Guardia's sister, Miss Elsie Fisher, were at the bedside.

The diminutive La Guardia—he was five feet, three inches—was a rough and ready exponent of the "get tough" school of politics. His caustic tongue was noted for its whiplash agility in exchanges with political enemies as well as for its fluency in foreign languages.

In his campaigns and during his years in office he addressed national groups in New York in their native language—Italian.

Soviet Attack Launched By Vishinsky Was Expected to Be Pressed Forward Today

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Persistent pressure by Russia to force a United Nations condemnation of the United States on the charge of "war-mongering" seemed certain today to split the U.N. Assembly into two sharply antagonistic camps.

The Soviet attack launched by Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky was expected to be pressed forward today by chief spokesman for the Soviet Union and for Yugoslavia who were scheduled to address the assembly in its heaviest day of general debate.

New evidence of the determination behind the Soviet campaign came last night in a debate-filled meeting of the Assembly's Steering Committee when Soviet delegate Andrei A. Gromyko, in a losing fight, identified support of proposals for restriction of the big-power veto in the Security Council with "hostility" to the Soviet Union itself.

He said that "certain influential circles and peoples are behind the campaign" to restrict the veto and that the campaign was "hostile" to the Soviet Union. He did not mention it, but Secretary of State George C. Marshall had told the assembly two days earlier that the United States favored drastic modification.

After putting forth his most forceful arguments, Gromyko lost, 9 to 2, his fight to block assembly discussion of an Argentine proposal to call a special United Nations conference to amend the veto section of the charter. Russia and Poland cast the minority vote in the 14-nation committee and India, China and France abstained.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie was reported trying to wind up the speaking at the earliest possible moment but had to revise plans to end it tonight. With 20 of the assembly's 53 delegations scheduled both morning and afternoon meetings today and another round of general debate beginning Monday morning.

Foreign Minister Georges Bidault was due to make France's basic policy speech of the session late today. British informants said Minister of State Hector McNeill probably would speak for Britain Monday.

Showdown Choice As the split between Russia and the United States developed, small nations were being pressed to the point of a showdown choice on the following day.

Talked to Redell Meanwhile, the South Charleston girl told her story to Lieut. William Redell at local police headquarters and the latter set the machinery in motion for the later arrests.

Among those questioned yesterday, the police said, was Mabel a cousin of Marello, who according to the police, drove the Marello car and the Cicero girl back to Charleston. The latter was arrested by F.B.I. agents there yesterday.

Both the Shannon girl and the local man, the police said, were released after questioning, but the probe yesterday indicated that new angles are to be completed and possibly others involved.

Marello Unaware Further information today indicated that Marello, who was arrested at the Stuyvesant Hotel, was unaware of the police probe which resulted in the arrest of the others. He had checked into the hotel at about 3 a. m. yesterday with his wife and the Shannon girl, the police said.

Estimates Higher The source said the department, as a matter of policy, was awarding no contracts for jobs estimated over that increase. Estimates on most projects, now, he added, are as much as 165 and 170 per cent of the 1940 prices.

Sells said 5,166 miles of state highways were more than 20 years old. A road that old, he added, "must be constructed to a higher lane capacity or (reconstructed) to improve reliability and highway safety." Another 5,800 miles are between 10 and 20 years old, he continued, and "only 1,807 miles are modern highways less than 10 years old."

4-Lane Roads Few Of 12,777 miles of improved highways, only 427 miles are four-lane and less than 1,000 miles three-lane. There are less than 35 miles of highways with more than four lanes.

Sells said the number of accidents involving property damage of at least $25 rose from 145,000 in 1941 to nearly 220,000 in 1946. The 1946 record of 104,812 personal injuries and 2,004 deaths, he said, was exceeded only once previously, in 1937.

"Many of these injuries and deaths and much of the staggering property losses may be eliminated by proper construction and reconstruction of the system," he asserted.

Others May Be Involved as Case Continues; Woman, Local Man Are Questioned

Haver Is Attorney Marello Is Scheduled for Examination by Comeau Sept. 29

Continued investigation by the F.B.I. and local police yesterday of the auto ride which led to the arrests of three persons on charges of violating the federal kidnapping law, indicates possible later involvement of others at least as material witnesses, the authorities revealed today.

Several persons from Charleston, W. Va., and one local man, were questioned by the police in their effort to complete details of the alleged kidnapping for which John Marello, 35, formerly of Glasco and John Ferguell, 33, of East Kingston, and Lois Cicero, 19, of Charleston, are held.

Hearing for Marello was adjourned to September 29 following his arraignment at 2:30 p. m. yesterday before U. S. Court Commissioner Martin Comeau. N. LeVan Haver, former Ulster county district attorney, appeared for he defendant, and bail was fixed at $10,000 pending hearing before the local commissioner. Marello was lodged in jail in lieu of bail.

Ferguell, was arraigned Thursday night before Comeau and is being held in the county jail in lieu of $10,000 for removal to the Southern District of West Virginia. He was represented by Attorney Francis Martocci.

He was arrested Thursday morning by Detectives Clarence Brophy and Wesley Cramer of the local police at the Stuyvesant Hotel after Ruth Virginia Fitzwater, 24, of South Charleston, W. Va., told local police that she had been brought to Kingston from that place against her will.

The girl, who is held as a material witness, charged that she was brought here apparently to prevent her appearance September 15 in a court at Charleston where Marello was scheduled to appeal a conviction charging him with the operation of a house of prostitution.

The Fitzwater woman said that she was taken on the ride here by Ferguell and Lois Welch Cicero and left in a room at the local hotel. Ferguell, the girl said, left her and said she was leaving on a trip but expected to be back the following day.

Talked to Redell Meanwhile, the South Charleston girl told her story to Lieut. William Redell at local police headquarters and the latter set the machinery in motion for the later arrests.

Among those questioned yesterday, the police said, was Mabel a cousin of Marello, who according to the police, drove the Marello car and the Cicero girl back to Charleston. The latter was arrested by F.B.I. agents there yesterday.

More Kingston Students Enroll at Colleges; Some Are Veterans; Others Post Graduates

Several more of the area's young people are entering colleges this fall as enrollments are announced by the schools.

Joseph J. Gardeski, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gardeski, R.F.D. 1, is attending Union College after four days at Freshman camp, Pine Knoll, Lake George. He was graduated from Kingston High School in 1946 when he received the Ellis T. Bookwalter Chapter II-Y Scholarship award. He studied under a post graduate course this year and was a member of the victorious football squad last year. Before leaving for college, he was employed at the Atlantic and Pacific Store, Prince street. Mr. Gardeski will major in civil engineering.

Miss Eileen Schwenk, daughter of Alderman-at-large and Mrs. John J. Schwenk of 152 Foxhall, will leave Sunday for Newport, R. I., where she will enter her freshman year at Salve Regina College. She was graduated from Kingston High School in June.

Richard McKay, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Herbert McKay, 10 Schuyler court, left today for Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., where he is enrolled in the liberal arts course. He was graduated from Kingston High School in 1946 and has been studying under a post graduate course this year.

Miss Louise Elsie Ackert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Ackert of 445 O'Neil street, left Wednesday for Edgewood Park School, Blarcliff Manor, where she is taking the medical assistant's course.

From Rosendale, Joseph Hill, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, Jame street, leaves this week-end for Fordham College. He was graduated in June from Kingston High School.

Bernard V. Trowbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac B. Trowbridge, 266 Albany avenue, has been accepted at Syracuse University's School of Art and will study industrial design. He was graduated in June.

Another June graduate, Miss Audrey M. Radenberg, 59 East Chester street, has entered State Teachers College at Albany where she is majoring in commerce.

Miss Phyllis Muller of Stone Ridge who was graduated from K.H.S. in June is attending State Teachers College at Cortland.

Miss Patricia D. Manfro, daughter of Mrs. Dora Manfro, 228 E. Mendon street, and the late P. Manfro, has started her freshman year at Plattsburg State Teachers College in the school of home economics. She was graduated from Kingston High School in 1946.

Robert M. McCaffery, 216 Albany avenue, left Thursday for the college of Arts and Sciences, Cornell University to major in economics. An army veteran, and Kingston High School graduate, class of 1945, Mr. McCaffery is a son of Consulting Engineer and Mrs. Edward I. McCaffery. Burton C. Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton J. Davis of 53 Crown street, is attending Rochester Institute of Technology where he is majoring in photo-technology.

Miss Peggy V. Schilling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Schilling, 1 Burgoin street, will leave Tuesday to enter Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville. She was graduated from Briarcliff Junior College in June with the highest average ever to be attained by a graduate of the school.

Miss Joan Hines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hines, Port Ewen, has entered Fordham Hospital School of Nursing, Bronx.

Francis Robert Malossy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Malossy, Port Ewen, is attending Holy Ghost Missionary College at Cornwall Heights, Pa.

Miss Sheila Carey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Carey, 179 Tremper avenue, left Wednesday for Edgewood Park School where she will take a two year course in business administration and secretarial work. She was graduated with the class of 1947 from K.H.S.

Marvin Millens, managing editor of "Dance Rumor," K.H.S. school paper, last year, will major in Journalism at Syracuse University. He was awarded the Kingston Newspaper Guild prize at commencement in June. Mr. Millens is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Millens, 81 Andrew street.

Planes of Mr. Gardeski, Miss Schwenk, Mr. McKay, Miss Ackert, Mr. Hill, Mr. Trowbridge, Miss Radenberg, Miss Manfro, Mr. Davis, Miss Hines, Miss Carey and Mr. Millens by Pennington Studio, David L. Fletcher, 14 President's Place, has entered Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, where he is studying physics.

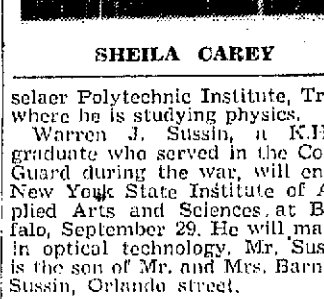

Warren J. Sussan, a K.H.S. graduate who served in the Coast Guard during the war, will enter New York State Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences at Buffalo, September 29. He will major in optical technology. Mr. Sussan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Barnett Sussan, Orlando street.

THE COURTESY OF PARTY CALLS

A reader asks: "Not long ago my husband and I went to a large buffet supper given for a distinguished man who was a great friend of ours. The party was, in spite of its size, very informal and enjoyable. Now, what is expected in this present day in return for formal hospitality? We were invited because of our friendship with the guest of honor. We scarcely knew the host and hostess at all and it seems to me that I ought to pay a party call upon the hostess. But my children and some of their friends who were here the other evening, agree that party calls are out. Will you discuss this situation?"

It is true that party calls are no longer the requirement they once were, but it is certainly courteous to leave a card on whoever has invited you for the first time. It is possible, of course, if your hostess herself has not been trained to social exactions, she may not expect you to pay your "party call." But it is always, it seems to me, better to err on the right side than on the wrong. In short, if you feel you should leave a card and don't, you are wrong.

Birth Announcements
Dear Mrs. Post: Please answer the following questions concerning a new baby: (1) On the small baby card attached to that of the parents, shall the baby's name also include the last name? (2) Should the name of parents be spelled out or may initials be used? (3) Should the date of birth be spelled out or may numerals be used?

Answer: (1) No. (2) They should be in full. (3) Numerals may be used.

Brown Never Formal
Dear Mrs. Post: Why is it a man's brown suit is not acceptable on semi-formal occasions as dark blue or gray is? I notice you always suggest dark blue or gray suits for men and never dark brown.

Answer: The rule is an arbitrary one. Browns, tans and greens are all informal. Oxford gray is almost as formal as black and very dark blue is next.

Mrs. Post has written a leaflet explaining all about "Buffet Dinners, Luncheons and Suppers." Included are who to invite, the invitation, setting the table and the menu. ### THE YEAR 5708

The celebration on September 15 of the Jewish New Year, the first day of year 5708 according to the Jewish calendar, was an impressive rejoinder to various peoples, sects, and individuals who would eliminate this powerful culture from the face of the earth.

The glory of Greece perished ages ago, and the might of Rome has faded into the yellow pages of history. Judaism has survived the antagonisms of cultures and nations which once dominated the world but now have been subsumed into historical memory. The power of Judaism is the power to outlast and outlive its persecutors.

The recent troubles over Palestine are an embarrassment to England, a shock to humanitarians the world over, and a severe blow to the Jewish quest for a national homeland. But in the perspective of history they are reduced to their proper proportions. They are a sad chapter, but only one chapter, in the long and yet unfinished story of a vigorous way of life.

This year 14 states, making a total of 33, have enacted laws against reckless flying. This shows how the world has moved. Once upon a time any attempt at all to fly would have been reckless.

FIRE SAFETY ON THE FARM

As part of a nationwide educational program to inform the American farmer of the fire menace which destroyed $90,000,000 worth of farm property and claimed 3,500 lives on farms in 1946, the National Board of Fire Underwriters has issued a new 24-page booklet, "Fire Safety on the Farm."

The booklet outlines corrective measures for the two basic causes of farm fires—faulty building construction, and lack of knowledge. The hazards in dwellings, barns and outbuildings are analyzed, with special emphasis on the increasing electrical and flammable liquid hazards found on the modern mechanized farm. Recommendations are made for combating two of the worst farm fire hazards—lightning and spontaneous ignition. The booklet also lists fire safeguards which should be included in the construction of new buildings, and provides suggestions on how existing structures may be brought up to a reasonable level of fire safety.

Of great importance, the handbook is a practical guide for the organization of a system of home fire prevention, and details what to do when fire breaks out, the equipment needed, and how to fight different types of fires. In addition, the need for community fire protection and cooperation with volunteer fire departments are stressed.

Single copies of "Fire Safety on the Farm" may be obtained free from the National Board of Fire Underwriters, 85 John street, New York 7, N. Y.

Let's hope that by the time the world gets painted up again another war doesn't come along and obliterate the job.

FOR GOOD LISTENING

The National Broadcasting Co.'s decision to ban mystery, crime and detective serials from the air until after 9:30 p. m., beginning next January, is a move to be endorsed. After that hour it is assumed that children will all be in bed, and their impressionable minds not disturbed by such programs.

The next step should be curtailment of motion picture programs and comic books which stress crime and offer undesirable excitement. The harm of such fare for youthful consumption can scarcely be overestimated. It is futile to talk about the need to stem juvenile delinquency while amusement programs on the air, on the screen and in publications glorify the outlaw and the criminal.

Seems as if the better food people have, the worse their teeth get, and what's to be done about that?

CENTRAL PROBLEM IN EUROPE

The central post-war problem of Europe is not Germany but Great Britain. No matter where one's sentiments may be, the present plight of Great Britain leaves Europe without the economic leadership to which that continent has become accustomed for many centuries. Pro-Britishers in this country complain that those who do not fervently expect Great Britain to emerge more powerful than before simply disregard the fact that two wars have left that country economically flat, that the Empire is mostly gone as a supporting bastion and that the future rests upon American cooperation and subsidy which may not come in the particular form Britain desires.

"The National Government, of which I was the head, had won the war. It was for the Socialist Government to win the peace. And it was for them to make the most of the remaining resources of the nation, to heal the wounds of war, to maintain our position in the world, and to give some measure of happiness and reviving prosperity to the men and women who had fought so well."

Then he added: "Unhappily, these men, called to the august task of setting the country on its feet again, were obsessed and dominated by party faction and class prejudice, and they cared far more for pleasing their own extremists than solving the grim troubles of the aftermath which beset us all. I do not blame them so much for the mistakes they have made, many and grievous though they may be, I blame them for their wrongful choice, in caring more for their party theories and dogma than about the revival of our strength."

Unfortunately for England, her Socialists picked the wrong time for vast reforms, reorganizations of the making of a people. The Socialists, for some reason, assumed that the United States would underwrite these experiments no matter what they cost. They are surprised that this country asks for facts and figures, for accounts, for specific data. They entered upon their revolution believing that they would have a blank check on the American treasury.

Churchill had no such illusions. He said of the Socialist schemes: "I do not believe that any of these methods will aid us in our economic crisis. The arrival of unwilling workers in industries to which they are strangers may well do more harm than good. Efficient arrangements for the steady and selective supply of raw materials would give far more fruitful results in a great many industries and over the whole field. Rarely, if ever in history, have the noble and altruistic qualities to which Mr. Attlee appealed been developed in the human race by compulsion. On the contrary, it is from resistance to tyranny in all its varied forms that the qualities which dignify and glorify mankind have sprung to life."

The pity of it is that the British worker's efficiency has been destroyed. I have some figures given by Mr. P. Lamartine Yates in 1937 comparing the agricultural output of British farmer and farm worker with those of other European countries and it is interesting to note that the Britisher comes out first:

Net Agricultural Value Produced per Head
 Great Britain .....$200
 Denmark .....$155
 Netherlands .....$120
 Belgium .....$100

George Windler, in the "Nineteenth Century and After," makes the point: "Under the new Agricultural Bill the British farmer is to be subjected to discipline and the opinion of certain ministers appointed by the State, he fails to cultivate his farm efficiently, it is to be taken from him, even though it may have been in the possession of his family for a hundred years."

When the Russians took the land from the kulaks, the world was horrified; yet British socialism proposes to do the same thing through the Agricultural Executive Committee which is to be created by the Minister of Agriculture. In a word, the British farmer is to be bureaucratized which means ultimately serfdom. As one studies what the British socialists are trying to do, it appears that their trend is not toward Communism but toward Fascism—toward Mussolini's type of Fascism. That would indeed be a tragic consequence of this war.

SULFA DRUGS

During the flu epidemic of 1918-19 we had a large number of cases of inflammation of the middle ear, in some of which the inflammation extended into the hard lump of bone behind the ear (mastoid). This made it necessary for the ear specialist to remove much of the infected bone by means of a chisel and hammer.

As many as four to six surgical operations of this kind were performed some days in our hospital. Fortunately, before World War II the sulfa drugs were discovered and the early use of them greatly controlled ear inflammation so that cases of mastoids were greatly reduced.

Some encouraging figures, showing the great value of the sulfa drugs in inflammation of the inner ear, are reported by Drs. E. Lubke and J. Iselin in the "Swiss Medical Journal." There were 606 patients with acute inflammation of the middle ear and its complications admitted to the ear, nose and throat clinic of the University of Basle during the period 1937 to 1940 when systematic sulfonamide treatment was not yet started.

Five hundred and five patients with acute inflammation of the middle ear, acute recurrence of mastoid inflammation and other complications were admitted during the period 1941 to 1944, when systematic sulfonamide treatment was practiced. The need for surgical operation in the clinic decreased by 32 per cent during the 1941 to 1944 period, as compared with the 1937 to 1940 period (before sulfa drugs were used). In the majority of cases the prevention of mastoid inflammation (mastoiditis) was the cause of the decrease in the need for operation.

Further, the death rate from acute middle ear inflammation was reduced from over 2 per cent to less than 1 per cent by the use of sulfa drugs. Equally successful was the treatment of old or chronic inflammation of the ear by sulfa drugs. These figures tell their own story which is the same in so many other conditions: Using the specific or special method of treatment "early" in any disease reduces the length of the period and reduces the death rate.

These physicians suggest that where the patients are treated at home the attending physician should give systematic treatment with sulfonamides (sulfa drugs) in all grave cases of acute inflammation of the middle ear.

CONVICTED COMMUNISTS

Can the Communist Party be padlocked by a court order under present Federal laws?

The Veterans of Foreign Wars intend, as I noted in a previous article, to find out by initiating legal action if the President ignores the recent V.F.W. request that we have the attorney general initiate such action.

I know of no instance in which a federal court ever has convicted a Communist for Communist activities. Some of the fifth columnists have been fined and jailed for minor infractions of Federal laws.

If the V.F.W. does not fare well in federal courts, the veterans might do better in state courts. Eight states have specifically outlawed the Communist Party and a state court in Arkansas thumbed its nose at the New Deal in its heyday (1935) by liquidating a Communist school and firing its officials for Communist activities.

The court found the college and four officials guilty under state laws which prohibit disseminating propaganda "which tends to destroy or overthrow the present form of government" or Arkansas or the United States by any act of violence or by the means or to employ any of such means as are calculated to cause such results.

Referring to this case recently the attorney general of the state of Arkansas wrote the Lutheran Research Society of Detroit, Michigan, that none of the convictions were appealed to higher courts by the Communists and that the college property was largely sold to satisfy the assessed fines.

Revolutionary
 The director, Lucien Koch, apparently convicted himself by his testimony in court, excerpts herewith:

Question: "Do you believe in capitalism?"
 Koch: "I do not."
 Question: "Do you believe in God?"
 Koch: "No."

Q—"Do you respect the flag of the United States?"
 Koch: "I personally am not a worshipper of symbols and I consider flags to be only symbols."

Q—"Do you have a higher regard for other governments than for the American government?"
 Koch: "I believe that the government of the United Socialist Soviet Republics is in many ways superior to the American government."

Testimony of witnesses established that the school openly glorified Soviet Communism, housed 24 boys and girls in one room, and that the purpose of the institution was "to build revolutionary students' and teachers' organizations in the colleges of the state" of Arkansas.

These are similar to statements made by all Communists when speaking frankly and when writing for their followers. Violence is a principle embraced in all Communist literature. Earl Browder, deposed Red puppet czar of the United States, Communist Party, and his successor, William Z. Foster, have said over and over the things Koch said before the court.

World revolution and the destruction of all representative governments are an avowed aim of all Communists.

You would think any court, even the Roosevelt-appointed Supreme Court, would find it impossible not to agree that such doctrine "tends to destroy or overthrow the present form of government." Fines and imprisonment and the threat of such action would quickly reduce the activities of the Red revolutionaries.

(Commonwealth College was endowed by the Communist Grand Fund, of which Earl Browder, William Z. Foster and Sidney Hillman were among the board members. Donations to the college were handled by the family of the late Justice Louis Brandeis, Marxist predecessor of the Marxist Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.)

(Immediately after Koch's conviction and the closing of the little Red school, Roosevelt appointed Koch to an upper bracket job in N.R.A. He had previously appointed the former director of Commonwealth College, William E. Zucht, to the job of chief of the planning division of the Department of the Interior.)

Perhaps the Veterans of Foreign Wars can use the Arkansas case as a precedent for legal action against the Communist Party.

Too Gol Darned Perfect

By FRANK TRIPP

Along with the disappearance of horses and trolleys, the little branch line railroad has become almost as extinct as the paper collar. The truck, bus and auto spelled its doom.

With it went a source of American humor that was unique. Nothing is a void which has not been filled.

The only traveler talk now comes from airplanes and Pullman smoking rooms. It used to come from stuffy, story-heated coaches where the common people rode.

There they were, packed closely together for quite periods of time, although they travelled only a few miles.

They were a chummy, got to know each other and to be intimate with train crews and station hands along the route. They could ride with empty pockets and pay next time.

The Tioga division of the Erie ran into the lumber country and soft coal fields of northern Pennsylvania. Its trains seemed to stop at every house and twice at double houses. It didn't quite deserve the reputation which the yarns of its passengers gave it but it did all most. Here are a couple:

Pulling into Blossburg the conductor demanded a ticket from an old man with a long beard.
 "You got my ticket," said the passenger.

"I did not," replied the conductor. "Where did you get on?"

"I got on at Pine City," the conductor said. "Nobody got on at Pine City but a little boy."

"That's right," said the old man, "I was that little boy."

At Elmira an ambulance met the train and took a mother and newborn babe to the hospital. She hadn't quite made it so the blessed event occurred en route, by aid of motherly midwives aboard.

The conductor was angry and disgusted. "Why in the world would a woman get on a train in that condition?" he blared so the whole car could hear him.

that condition?" he blared so the whole car could hear him. A lumberman roused from his slumber, took another swig from his pint of clear alcohol and proclaimed: "Well, maybe when she got on she wasn't."

This one is real because I sat across the aisle and heard it.

A 280 pound woman and her short, shriveled husband had been in town shopping. His arms were so full of bundles that he was almost concealed when he sat down next to the window. When his wife plunked down beside him he was completely blacked out.

The conductor came for the tickets. She said, "He's got 'em." He started to look. Packages fell all over. The woman bawled him out. "He searched in vain and her thrice crosscussed to the amusement of the passengers. Pretty soon everybody felt sorry for the little man. He was out in the aisle. Packages were all settled down next to the floor. He was searching from pocket to pocket. She was giving him the works; looked ready to swat him one.

The conductor got sorry for him too and said: "Couldn't be you lost 'em?"

"What do you mean, couldn't be he lost 'em?" the fat lady yelled. "He'd lose his head if it wasn't fastened on him. Couldn't be he lost a little thing like a ticket! The old fool lost a bass drum once."

I used to read a ride on those little railroads but I'd pay excess fare for just one more trip with the real America that traveled them.

And I'd pay Broadway prices to sit one more night in a tuxedo gallery seat and see Kirke Brown play "The Ten Ten Door." When last I saw it the ten tons teetered, started to fall and was held up one-handed by Kirke, while he embraced the heroine with the other.

Everything is too gol darned perfect nowadays.

Leaves From Boyle's Notebook

By HAL BOYLE

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 19
 (P)—Fear was an unseen passenger as the streamlined coach train trundled heavily through the darkness toward a hurricane-strained bridge.

For six hours on its path from Jacksonville to Miami Thursday the train had been held up at Fort Pierce—well within the deadly whirlpool of wind and salt spray sweeping across southern Florida.

The passengers grew steadily more uneasy as the hours passed and the storm mounted, whining one moment around the parked train and then beating the streaming windows with spikes of torn green walmatto.

Let's go, some passengers complained. But others looked out at the wind-tortured pine and palm trees and were silent.

A trainman passed through, dripping wet.
 "What's holding us up?" someone asked.

"Checking a bridge up ahead," he said briefly. "Have to wait until we can get a wrecker up to test it."

Rumor spread through the cars that the hurricane had loosened supports of the span across the St. Lucie Canal north of West Palm Beach.

The gale rocked the train like a ship weathering in heavy waves. Some passengers became seasick. A woman diabetic sufferer fell ill and was carried out through the rain squalls to a hearse-ambulance.

Batteries Wear Down
 After night fell the weakened train batteries wore down and the lights fluttered out spasmodically until the train was in darkness. It was then that fear, the dubious gift of night, came aboard.

Around 8 p. m. the train began moving almost imperceptibly, and by then every passenger aboard knew about the bridge waiting ahead.

"I think we should stay here," she said.

Based on the value of the dollar today, we sometimes wonder if even the legal tender is counter fit.

It takes nature 18 to 20 years to develop all the bones and muscles of our feet. And then we walk all over them.

The only bad feature in being a success is that it leaves so little time for loafing.

to say that we must make the idea not only live within ourselves but within the community as well.

Bishop Oxnun also briefly touched on outstanding men of the world who have made other maps. He mentioned Mohandas K. Gandhi who once said, "good government is not a substitute for self-government." "Ghandi," declared the speaker, "certainly was one of the makers of the world map."

Another he pointed out was Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru of India who has done much to change the map of the world.

Renowned scientists, for their outstanding work in the field of medicine in combating diseases and plagues, have been instrumental in changing the maps of the world, the speaker stated.

Should Remember Hitler

Bishop Oxnun cited the case of Adolf Hitler and told his audience that the Nazi leader nearly succeeded in changing the map of the world in his continual blaspheming of the idea to his people that they were superior. "Thank God, however," he said, "Hitler failed, but we always must keep the memory fresh in our minds just how close he did come to making that map."

The bishop touched on his college football career to bring home the point that we must study ideas until we know what they're all about. "Out at U.S.C.," he said, "our football coach put us through very rigid training prior to the opening of the season. At first we disliked the idea but as the season wore on we realized the importance of knowing the ins and outs of the game."

Saying that the truth of the matter is that we don't know much about religion, the speaker urged his listeners, both young and old, to form small groups and to seek knowledge of religion. Then he said, "take some aspect of Christianity and try it out."

Says Bigotry Fades

The New York bishop also spoke briefly on race and color. He said the step now underway, although possibly not the full answer, whereby man's ability to earn a living is being determined by character and not creed or color, is one in the right direction. He cited several cases in Gary, Ind., where many Negroes reside and said that race and color prejudice is fading out of the picture daily.

The Negro in Gary, the speaker said, is now working with good results in various plants such as newspaper offices, steel mills, department stores and other places of business. He also explained the case of Jackie Robinson, the Brooklyn Dodger first baseman as an outstanding case of where man's character is above all else.

A part of the Crusade for Christ, Bishop Oxnun said is the Christian idea and it is paramount. It is through this, he said, that the map of the world of tomorrow will be made.

"Who will make the map of the world of tomorrow the speaker asked his listeners, I don't know. Some people are trying to make the map right now, and then he ended his interesting address by saying, I sincerely hope you people will make that map."

Friday evening's service, was presided over by the Rev. Burton F. Farr and the Rev. Herbert I. Willinger, pastor of the Trinity Methodist Church. Pat Saunders of the St. James Methodist Youth Fellowship offered the prayer and William Wilkins of Trinity Methodist gave the scripture lesson. The girls' choir of St. James Methodist Church offered the anthem, "The Shepherd's Psalm." Mrs. Henry Terpening was the soloist. Organists were Charles C. Shutt and C. Franklin Pierce, minister of music at St. James Methodist Church.

Was Dinner Guest

Prior to last evening's address, Bishop Oxnun, who was one of President Truman's special envoys to Europe in 1946, was guest of honor at a dinner for ministers and their wives at Trinity Methodist Church. About 80 attended the dinner.

During Friday afternoon's business session, the Rev. Robert Guice of Ravena was elected secretary-treasurer of the conference. Those taking part were the Rev. Lavern C. Dibble of Jeffersonville, Monroe Burger, treasurer of the board of stewards and of the board of trustees; the Rev. J. Gordon Chamberlin, conference executive secretary; the Rev. Joseph Rainier, Jr., of the Cocomans-New Baltimore charge; Mrs. D. N. Seore of the Kingston district W.S.C.S. and the Rev. John M. Pearson, D.D., of New York.

"The results of the contest are far better than I had expected," said Don Williams, secretary of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce, whose Retail Merchants Committee sponsored the fall display last week.

New York's 'Little Flower' Gave Color to Political Arena

Packed into the five-foot-two-inch figure of Fiorello Henrico LaGuardia, who died this morning, was enough personality and charm to make him one of the most colorful figures ever to walk on America's political scene. Born of immigrant parents on New York's lower East Side in 1882, the man who became New York's beloved "Little Flower" was never one of the crowd. He learned to talk Yiddish and Italian, and later made political speeches in these tongues. He learned to fly, and during World War I was a major in the Air Corps. He attended law school at night, working as an interpreter in the day. He served in Congress for 10 years, attracting attention with his trademark—horn-rimmed eye glasses pushed up on his forehead—and his fighting, earthy speeches. He had the gall to run against the debonair Jimmy Walker, and lost a good fight.

He swept Tammany Hall into still-existent obscurity when he became mayor in 1934. He was the first mayor of New York ever to serve three consecutive terms. He endeared himself to the rank-and-file New Yorker by his showmanship—chasing fire engines, kissing beauty queens, posing with anything and anybody—by his honesty, by his campaigns against "tinhorn gamblers" and burlesque shows, by his accomplishments—tunnels, schools, playgrounds, and the airfield which bears his name. When he retired from public office he had been director-general of UNRRA and federal director of the Office of Civilian Defense, besides congressman and mayor—he became a radio personality and newspaper columnist. During New York's newspaper delivery strike, millions throughout the country laughed at newsreels showing him acting out the Sunday comics over the air for the city's children. The people called him the "Little Flower," they called him "The Hat," and his enemies called him other things, but nobody ever called Fiorello LaGuardia dull.

great issues of the assembly session. Delegates who came to the meeting with hopes of finding practical grounds for compromise agreement between the two powers found the record for this opening week left them no room for optimism.

Any thought that Vishinsky might have been making a one-shot assault on the U. S. in his speech Thursday was dashed yesterday when Kuzma Kiselev, for the Soviet republic of White Russia, repeated many of the same charges of war plot against Russia in the United States and emphatically asserted, "war threatens to erupt into the peaceful life of the nations."

Several speakers for small nations continued to pound their earned theme that the great powers should "forget their selfish interests" and try to find a basis for working together.

The case was pointedly put by Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, India's chief delegate. She said her newly independent nation would follow its own course in world affairs and avoid entanglements with either Russia or the U. S. The peoples of the world, she said, "don't eat ideologies."

But diplomatic observers here were agreed that the small nations were in a tough spot. The division between the proposal put up by Marshall for the U. S. and Vishinsky for Russia was clearest.

Marshall asked for a reform of U. S. peace machinery through creation of an assembly committee on security. It would be free of the veto and backstop the vetoed Security Council. He asked for modification of the veto itself and for strong action by the assembly on Greece and Korea.

Troopers Seeking Owner of $30 That Truckman Found

State Police at Highland station are seeking the owner of a money bag containing $30 turned in by an honest truck driver, Albert Campbell of 750 Beck street, Bronx.

Friday as he drove his Fort Nelson Express truck over the state highway, near Esopus, he stopped to pick up pajama trousers and the bag in which there was $30 in change, mostly pennies, according to his report to the police when he turned it over to them.

The money bag, bearing an Oneonta bank stamp and pajamas were lost from a passing auto it is thought by the Troopers who still have the money despite telephone messages and other efforts since yesterday to find the owner.

Repairing Tower

Repairs were being made Friday to the radio tower on the building of Jack's Restaurant at 596 Broadway. Many people who observed the tower Friday afternoon after the high wind were of the impression the tower had been damaged by the storm. The management of the restaurant reported the tower had not been damaged but was undergoing repairs.

The Rev. William J. McVey, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation and benediction.

Rifton Fire Ladies Install New Officers

The annual installation of officers of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Rifton Fire Department was held at the Rifton firehouse, Monday.

Mrs. Albert Dalluge, president Ladies' Auxiliary St. Remy Fire Department, acted as Installation Officer.

After the regular business meeting, the following officers were installed: Mrs. George Clements, incumbent, president; Mrs. Nathaniel Phillips, vice-president; Miss Anna Devine, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Eckert, news reporter; Mrs. Walter Bailey, Mrs. Arthur Withall and Mrs. E. Phillips, trustees.

All outgoing officers were presented with gifts by the auxiliary in appreciation of their service. Immediately following the installation, refreshments were served.

As congressman, he fought prohibition, delighted the country by demonstrating, in Congress, how to make legal home brew.

Scorning official limousines, he endeared himself to New York's straphangers by traveling daily from his Bronx home to City Hall in subway.

Cartoonists made the most of short, squat LaGuardia's penchant for big, wide-brimmed hats and for chasing fires, day or night.

No Big Damage Reported After Wind, Rain Friday

High winds and lashing rain late yesterday afternoon spread fears locally of a storm of hurricane fury as slight damage was reported in various sectors of the city.

A darkened sky and winds of increasing velocity caused considerable alarm and inconveniences to local residents on their way home from work, but the storm of short duration left no serious damage in its wake.

It came on the heels of reports of hurricane damage in the South and of reports from New England that a Northeastern storm had ripped into the shoreline late yesterday afternoon, and uprooted trees.

The storm locally, however, resulted in nothing more serious than slight damage to electric circuits and some scattered fallen limbs, according to the police.

A report at 3:35 p. m. said that a limb was down in front of 115 Wurts street and that some wires were down near E. 42nd street.

A large limb was reported down in front of 47 Elmendorf street at 4:10 p. m. and at 5:10 p. m. a high tension wire was reported down and across the road at North street and Delaware avenue.

Bowman Fined, Jail Sentence Is Suspended

Harry Bowman, 44, colored, of 39 Tompkins street, was fined $5 each on two charges of disorderly conduct and given a 30-day suspended sentence pending good behavior by City Judge Matthew V. Cahill today.

Bowman, the police said was arrested at the Tompkins street address at 6:26 a. m. today on complaint of Leroy Kelly, colored, his nephew, of the same address. He was arrested on a similar charge by Officers George Bowers and Edward Leonard.

Kelly charged, according to the police information, that Bowman had used vile and indecent language and threatened him with a razor.

German, French, Yiddish or Yugoslav.

Known to New Yorkers as "The Little Flower" "Butch" or "The Hat"—the latter deriving from the distinctive type of headgear he preferred—LaGuardia was the first reform mayor this city ever re-elected.

Fusion Candidate

In 1933, LaGuardia, as a successful Fusion candidate, took office to find that the city had been denied further financing by banks. Determinedly, he went to work on the problem and before long was obtaining money from the same bankers who had refused to accept city bonds.

Soon he became known as "the little man who is everywhere," and more than once proudly told friends that he was mayor of New York for 24 hours of every day. He attended fires wearing a fireman's hat, declared war on neckties, banned burlesques and the sale of salacious magazines.

On Jan. 1, 1946, "The Little Flower" turned over the administration of the city, often called the nation's smallest important office, to O'Dwyer. LaGuardia had declined to run for re-election in 1945 but had said during the campaign that fall he could win the election even if he ran on a "laundry ticket."

An indefatigable worker, he never spared himself. He ate sparingly, honoring the fact that "the doctor won't let me eat what I want to" and he limited himself in the use of his cigars and his pipe.

He entered Mount Sinai Hospital for a checkup last April and the following month was re-admitted as a patient. On June 18 he underwent an operation for chronic pancreatitis, a chronic inflammation of the pancreas. His physician said the chronic condition had been responsible for his development of diabetes.

For his service as director general of the U.N.R.R.A. toward the end of his mayoral tenure, he was awarded the nation's highest civil decoration, the Medal of Merit, and President Truman said then that he had earned the "gratitude of millions in the world who were threatened with starvation."

Friendly to labor, LaGuardia's tenure in Congress was highlighted by his co-authorship with the late Sen. George Norris of the Norris-LaGuardia Act prohibiting the indiscriminate use of court injunctions in labor disputes.

When the United States entered the last World War, LaGuardia beamed anti-Fascist radio talks to Italy urging, in blunt Italian, that the people of Italy renounce Mussolini.

Trees Down in Storm

A severe electric storm accompanied by high winds and a sudden drop in temperature passed over Ulster county Friday afternoon. State Police at Lake Katrine received a report of a fallen tree on Route 9-W five miles north of Kingston and the Highland Troopers were notified of a road obstruction near New Paltz where a tree fell on the highway.

was found in the parking lot on John street and Marello at the local hotel soon after the hunt was begun.

The arrest at the hotel was made by the chief and Detectives Brophy and Cramer.

Announcement of the arrests was made yesterday by Edward Scheidt, special agent in charge of the New York office of the F.B.I. He said that the United States attorney in the Southern District of West Virginia has authorized prosecution against Marello, Ferguell and the Cicero girl under the federal kidnapping statute.

The next step locally for Marello, according to the authorities, is the examination before Corcoran September 29, but inasmuch as Ferguell has been ordered held for removal to the Southern District of West Virginia, it is believed that he will be taken there by a federal marshal within the next few days.

Sheriff George C. Smith said today that he had received no notice to date that a marshal is expected to arrive.

F.B.I. Means Business

The announcement by the F.B.I. yesterday indicated the possibility of the defendants being dealt with severely. It stressed the point that violations of the federal kidnapping statute, popularly known as the Lindbergh Act, carry penalties up to the death sentence in the "discretion of the jury, where the victim is harmed."

Marello, who has a record of convictions locally and who is charged with avoiding justice on the one hand, and in Chicago, where he will undoubtedly face a severe sentence if convicted. A former local professional boxer, he was known for his claim to associations with the notorious Lucky Luciano, while in prison.

ter they could in schoolhouses and public buildings during the pitch darkness of the night which saw wind-driven rains beating through the skeletons of windows and pounding the roofs with steady, maddening monotony.

New Orleans itself was groggy from the hurricane's all-enveloping punches.

Streets were piled with debris—wrecked automobiles, torn signs, uprooted trees and fallen power lines. Communications were cut all over town and telephone linemen and public utility crews labored mightily to restore service.

Mayor De Lesseps Morrison counted the damage at $3,000,000 roughly. He said there was at least $1,750,000 damages to automobiles and homes. The remainder of the estimate he distributed haphazardly for signs, shrubbery, trees, plate glass windows and seawalls.

At Pascagoula, Miss., honey-moon haven, vacation spot and a vigorous little industrial community founded mostly on ship building, 500 residents were reported homeless by the Red Cross and Disaster Relief Chairman Karl Weisenberg said all of the town's 7,000 homes were damaged to some extent.

SPECIAL CAMP SALE

TUESDAY,

SEPT. 23, 1947

1 P. M.

Attention Dealers, Saddle Horse Men

100—HORSES—100

We have been commissioned to sell for you, Hudson Valley of Washington Well Stables, 12 real good saddle horses and saddles and bridles. These horses are in good condition and right out of work. They include several spots, roans and buckskins. There will be several other consignments from camps and academics. A good saddle horse can be bought worth the money. Several good work horses in matched pairs and single horses. Horses for killing are bringing top prices. Bring in your old horses to sell.

All kinds of horse equipment for sale in our harness store. Private Sales Daily.

McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

Lead 'From Fright' Helps Declarer Win

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY
America's Card Authority
Written for NEA Service

Are you familiar with the expression, "He led from fright"? The bridge player who reaches in and gets a card because it is his turn to play will never be a good player. He should have a reason for every play he makes, though of course his reasoning may not always be correct. When today's hand was played, the opening leader, who was a good sound player, selected a lead which gave declarer a correct reading on the hand.

When declarer played low from dummy on the opening spade lead, East won with the king and returned a spade. Dummy won and South led a low club from dummy, which was a nice play. East played low, declarer played the jack and West's queen won. Another spade came back and South had to win with the queen. Then he led a small club and West put on the king. Now what should declarer do? If he went up with the ace, the club suit would not be established and East would get in on the third round.

The question was, who held the rest of the spades, and the opening lead told declarer the story. West had started off with the jack of spades, and then played the seven and five. If West had held four spades originally, he would have had led the fourth best. Declarer therefore reasoned that his correct play was to let the king of clubs hold the trick. There was now no play that West could make that would endanger South's contract. Some players made the mistake of going up with the ace of clubs and then trying the diamond finesse for the ninth trick.

If West had opened the five of spades instead of the jack, declarer would have had a problem. He might well reason that West held the spade suit, and that his proper play was to win the second club trick and take the diamond finesse.
